The Wedding Ringer

FRI. 1/16, PG-13
(NOT SCREENED
BY DEADLINE)

Josh Gad is a shy groom aiming to impress his future in-laws (Kaley Cuoco-Sweeting is his bride-to-be) by enlisting best man-for-hire Kevin Hart. It's a cross between Hitch and I Love You, Man, but if Josh and Kevin project the chemistry they've exhibited together on the talk show circuit, this will be 2015's first comedy crowd-pleaser.

Blackhat

FRI. 1/16, R ★★☆☆☆☆

It's directed by Collateral's Michael Mann, stars the sexy Chris Hemsworth (as a hacker sprung from prison to take down a terrorist) and has Viola Davis in a supporting role. So it's too bad this "thriller" is a mishmash of incoherent violence and uninvolved scenes of stars pecking at computer keyboards.

Paddington

FRI. 1/16, PG ★★★★★

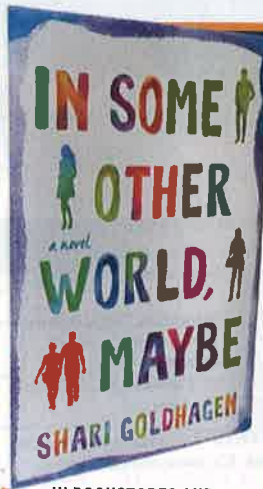

The beloved bear gets a boisterous big-screen treatment, leaving the jungles of Peru to seek a home in London, growing close with a family while trying to escape villainous taxidermist Nicole Kidman. It's a madcap misadventure told with warmth, wit and inventive physical comedy. You'll grin and bear it!

Little Accidents

FRI. 1/16 & ON VOD, NR ★★★★★

Elizabeth Banks is riveting as a mom whose son goes missing in a town reeling from the death of 10 coal miners in an accident many blame her husband for. As she bonds with both the accident's sole survivor and a boy who knew her son, this well-acted, somber indie underplays its dramatic possibilities.

In Some Other World, Maybe

BY SHARI GOLDHAGEN

(A)

The Gist: In 1992, three groups of teens go to see the movie version of the Eons & Empires comic, and over the years, their lives intersect in this bittersweet and sharply funny novel.

Notable Quotable: "That was the moment Adam realized he was good at pretending, at convincing people he felt things he didn't - the moment he decided he wanted to be an actor."
